

The Washington Post Style

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 2011

goingoutguide

Nightlife agenda

The Going Out Gurus highlight the week's best DJs, bands, dance nights and parties

DANCE BITS & PIECES

Rarely can a happy hour be called moving. But that will be the case tonight at Artisphere — that globe-like cultural center on Wilson Boulevard — when

◀Jane Franklin

Dance offers a sneak peek of the season ahead and a selection of libations.

The local troupe known for collaborating with artists working in other disciplines has a season lineup that includes the kid-friendly "The Big Meow!," a race against the clock with the 24 Hour Dance Project, and "Double Take," which takes the audience on a tour of the Atlas Performing Arts Center. The company will also revisit "Forty +" — performances that incorporate dancers age 40 and older. The $15 admission to the preview includes one drink ticket, and there will be happy hour prices on beer, margaritas and sangria at Artisphere's Here CafeBar.

Wednesday from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.
Artisphere, 1101 Wilson Blvd., Arlington.
703-933-1111. www.janefranklin.com.
$15.

— Stephanie Merry

PAUL GILLIS PHOTOGRAPHY